ONALASKA POLICE DEPARTMENT'S LIBRARY GOES LIVE

Curious about crime statistics in Onalaska? Visit the new Police Department website library and click on Uniform Crime Reports. Got a question about a Police Department policy? Check out the library section titled current policies.

"This is something that I have been working on for a while," said Onalaska Police Chief Jeffrey Trotnic, "it's a way to make information more accessible to the public. I think that's important it helps to keep the lines of communication open."

According to Trotnic the library also contains a section with important new case law and articles on hot legal topics.

"There are quite a few publications specific to law enforcement that the general public may not have access to," said Trotnic, "dealing with widely diverse topics, some of them affecting the way we police. So this library on our website will constantly be updated."

The yearly report which gives a synopsis of Police Department programs, information and statistical data is also available in the library.

"This is a concept that we will constantly expand upon," Trotnic said, "I want this to become a resource for citizens."
